Minutes: Brief summary of meeting

Summary:

The committee reviewed and discussed 2015-2016 school years progress towards the Literacy and Numeracy goals for student performance goal 2. The roll out of Writer's and Reader's workshop is going very well. It was noted that this is a huge initiative requiring many hours of professional development. Teachers are eager to see and evaluate the progress of the program after its implementation over a few years. So far teachers are seeing progress as students are moving across DRA levels and AIMSweb scores are improving. The committee agreed that the children are overwhelmingly excited and enthusiastic about reading more than ever before. Teachers also requested more opportunities for professional development in Writer's and Readers' workshop in the future to ensure a solid foundation in reading instruction. The next scheduled date for Michelle Witman's visit is March 1st.

The committee also reported teachers using both the NYS Engage Math Modules and Go Math common core series for math instruction but also commented that more professional development is necessary. That scores are good but teachers would like to continue working to find the best program.

The topic of ENL focused around a central question that still remains, whether certified special education teachers who are also certified ENL are able to teach in the same classroom using both certificates. It was confirmed that teachers in certified in both areas are able to use both certificates. It was reported that every class is different based on students' needs and co-teaching strategies used. Overall the co-teach models are working well, having Diane Ripple, co-teach consultant has been helpful keeping teachers focused on the different types of co-teach models that can be used in a classroom to meet different instructional needs.

AIMSweb Plus-Information about AIMSweb plus was shared by Aleta and Jessica who attended an AIMSweb workshop in November. As of then BOCES was offering for districts to make the change to AIMSweb plus in August 2016 free of charge. The committee requested that we have grade level meeting about the change over and what types of assessments they can use to benchmark students. Also, if the change is made then time for roll out and training will need to be considered.
